IF WE WOULD.

If we would but check the speaker When he spoils his neighbor's fame, If we would but help the erring, Ere we utter words of blame; If we would how many might we Turn from paths of sin and shame?

Ah, the wrongs that might be righted If we would but see the way! Ah, the pains that might be lightened Every hour and every day, If we would but hear the pleadings, Of the hearts that go astray.

Let us step outside the stronghold Of our selfishness and pride, Let us lift our fainting brothers, Let us strengthen ere we chide; Let us ere we blame the fallen, Hold a light to cheer and guide.

Ah, how blessed-ah, how blessed Earth would be if we'd thus try, Thus to aid and right the weaker, Thus to check each other's sigh, Thus to talk of duty's pathway To our better life on high.

In each life, however lowly, There are seeds of mighty good; Still we shrink from sonls appealing, With a timid " if we could:" But a God who indges all things, Knows the truth is, " If we would."

THE UNTERWALD WEDDING.

Maitre Seiler was a well preserved, agile gentleman of nearly sixty. At twenty he thought of nothing but law; at thirty of nothing but pleading; at forty he became a judge and only at fifty-five did he make the discovery that weighing law and splitting hairs upon the meaning of words and phrases is scarcely all the pleasure to be found in existence.

At fifty-five he awoke to the consciousness that he had wasted life. He was very clever at every point in the common law of Unterwald, but he was not wise enough to know that at that age one can scarcely begin life over

If apart from the law he had ever a passion, it was a quiet, half doubting love of fishing; and, therefore, when he gave up his judgeship, and retired into private life with the respect and even veneration of all who knew him, having angled all his life for clients, and settled the differences of other legal anglers through nearly a score of years, he fell to angling for fish as the one joy of his life.

Indeed, it was this new occupation, amidst nature, trees, flowers and living water which prompted Maitre Seiler to the conclusion that he had made a mistake in life when he brought it down from grinding law from New Year's Day to St, Sylvester's, which is the last day in December.

The old man's heart was desolate. His quiet resigned old housekeeper (a sad spinster who seythe. had thrown herself into the pathetic and tears early in life), Maitre Seiler found, now that he saw forest and sky daily, to be quite a wearisome woman; and the consequence was that Maitre Seiler would pack up his fishing wallet with a crust and flask of white wine for his lunch, and go out from six in the morning until

One day, having caught trout until he was tired of hooking them, and the afternoon being close (it was a warm April that year), he fell asleep under a whispering fir tree, and then he slept the sound sleep of innocence for hours.

Then as he awoke, he experienced that wonderful luxury, a gradual regaining of the senses -while a sweet voice was singing in the dis-

When he sat up and rubbed his eyes he found that the sun had set, and that he himself was rather stiffer in the limbs than was exactly comfortable.

The voice came nearer, and through the break in the glade he saw a mountaineer girl spinning as she came slowly forward, followed by two or three browsing goats.

The girl was about sixteen; her yellow, light wavy hair fell in two long, red ribbon tied plaits, while the black bodice and poppy-colored skirt completed a far more charming picture than any the old judge had seen in the court through all his legal years.

He sighed lightly. She stopped and looked about; but she show-

"Don't be afraid," he said gently. The girl smiled as she saw the pleasant old gentleman and said:

"Oh, no; and Bruttlewart and Michlin would butt you if I told them."

The goats looked at the stranger in an undecided way, but apparently resolved to go on munching.

"And who art thou?" "I am Lotte.

"And where does Lotte live?"

"I am the daughter of the Forester Yeri." "Ha! ha! art thou the daughter of Forester Yeri? I remind'me I have seen him in

To tell the truth at once, the old judge was in love with Lotte, though she was only sixteen, and the old gentleman was by that time fifty-eight, if a day.

"I lay me, good judge, you will sleep till late in the morning," said broad-chested Yeri, when they were saying good night.

"Oh, no," replied the judge, wishing to cut a good figure before Lotte; "I never was more active than I now am. I shall be up with the lark and out before any of you."

Nevertheless, though they softly called him three times, he never woke, and in fact, did not present himself until the forester's breakfast had been waiting a whole hour.

The forest girl had been out and away for hours, and as he saw her, with the fresh morning color on her face, and holding out to him a bunch of wild flowers which she had gathered, e decided that a pretty girl looked better at sunrise even than at sunset.

That was the beginning of it.

The prim housekeeper wondered what be came of her master, until all capacity for astonishment was gone, while good Yeri and his wife, though they were wonderfully benefitted and honored by the old judge's friendship, were marvellously puzzled to find an answer to the riddle why Maitre Sailer came to their hut four and five times in the week.

One day a barrel of rikvir, a capital wine in those parts, would be sent with Maitre Seiler's compliments, and, within a week, an admirable present of sausage would be received. The gravest condemnation of the poor old ndge, and the best proof of the honesty of the old couple, Yeri and Kristine, were to be found in the fact that these latter never suspected the basis of all these civilities on the part of the smitten old gentleman.

As for trout, the good woman Kristine, was weary of cooking it, so much of that fish did the good old judge bring to the chalet.

He never said much to Lotte, spoke like a father to her, and certainly never enabled the pretty girl to guess what was in his beart. This life went on to the end of June, when the tall mountain grass was ready for the The old judge, however, had never slept at

But upon that particular night in June, he had made up his mind to speak to Yeri; and then it was he found that judge and orator as he was, he could not plead for himself.

"What ails the old judge, to-night?" thought the forester. "He does not seem himself." The time went on, and when at last the judge decided that he would defer it until morning, the forester made the discovery that it was dark, and the moon would not be up for two for the night.

He had no idea that his remaining put the primitive family to any inconvenience, no more than at the moment he learned that he took Lotte's room from her.

But, in fact, the young goat-herdess was carried off to her mother's room for the night, while the forester made himself up a bed of furs, &c., on the ground of the living room. He thought the girl looked pale and anxious, but he could not detect that she was in deep tribulation.

A little while and the forest hut was quite quiet-not a light to be seen.

Now they have a habit in parts of Switzerland of cutting the high grass by moonlight, the belief being common that the grass so cut makes better hay than that which falls beneath the scythe in sunlight.

The old judge, unable to sleep, was turning over in his mind what he should say on the following day to the forester, when he heard the tinkle of cow bells, the lumbering of heavy wagons, and the rattle of talking and singing voices, all of which gradually approached.

Not ignorant of the custom of moonlight hay making, the old judge found the rustic sounds rather soothing than not, when he thought he heard a tapping at the window.

He listened and the sound was repeated. He knew that the window was ten or twelve feet from the ground, and that it could only be vine which grew on the wall about the lattice. at the sight of such a battery.

So the old indge went home wearily, a sadder and wiser man. The forester, Yeri, wondered why the old judge never came, while the presents were sent as before, and the melancholy housekeeper marveled that her master gave up Seiler was quite happy, but never a word said he. Not even once again did he go to the hut in the forest, and he benefitted by the lesson he learned-that youth is for youth, and that if 'tis thrown away in the early summer time of life it is not to be picked up again in the autumn of existence. For no man can retrace his life.

The Effects of Imagination

Imagination is really but a sort of mental aberration, a species of insanity. New facts and experiments are daily adduced in confirmation of this long standing theory. An Italian savant, Signor Volpicelli, has just communicated to the French Academy of Sciences, a paper containing a detailed account of certain experiments and curious observations of his. Having met with a number of very nervous persons, who pretended they were very painfully affected by the proximity of a magnet, he hours, so the good judge was invited to stop determined to satisfy himself whether terrestrial magnetism really produced any effect upon them, or whether the various impressions and sensations they declared they experienced were only due to a disorder of their imagination. He first submitted them openly to the influence of a powerful magnet. The nervous effects were immediately manifested. The crises continued to take place even when the magnet was stealthily removed, and a common, harmless iron bar was substituted therefor. But when the patients were unconsciously subjectactually failed to experience anything unusual, any peculiar sensation. The magnetic influence and the symptoms arising therefrom were accordingly but the result of fancy. A distinguished professor who fell into terrible nervous spasms and paroxysms whenever a magnet was placed near him, was surrounded unknown to himself, while delivering one of netic currents, and bodies. Signor Volpicelli had placed magnets in his desk and under it, as well as underneath his chair and all around him. The lecture went on as usual, and was finally brought to a close without any unwonted incident or demonstration. But as the professor was about to take his leave, well pleased with himself and his audience, Volpicelli stopped him, brought him back on the platform, disclosed his little ruse and showed him all the magnets he had been exposed to. The profes-

A Curious Legend.

A new Indian Agency between Grand River and Fort Rice, called Standing Rock, derives its name from a large boulder standing out alone upon the prairie about three miles from the river. There is a strange superstition connected with this rock, and the Sionx City, Iowa, Journal thus tells it:

"Many years ago a powerful band of Indians made that section their stamping ground. The chief of the band deserted his old wife for a young squaw. This so grieved the old Queen that she went back to the river, and sat upon the ground and mourned for several days. Upon the 9th day of her grief she turned into this large boulder. The Indians at that agency all believe this story to this day, and worship the boulder as a God. The rock has been decorated with ribbons, pieces of red flannel, and every high-colored piece of cloth they have been able to get hold of since time out of mind. These decorations are replaced as often as they become decayed or blown away by the winds. THE LEGISLATURE.—This body will assemble in Raleigh on Monday, the 16th inst. W hope the business of the General Assembly will be confined to important legislation, discarding the mass of frivolous local matter which generally consumes so much time and lengthens the session, entailing much unnecessary expense upon the State.

Let the session be the shortest on record. The incoming Legislature will have in the House 82 Democrats, 4 Independents and 34 Republicans. The Senate will be composed of 38 Democrats and 12 Republicans, and as every good citizen takes an interest in the proceedings of Congress and the Legislature, the newspapers will be unusually interesting, as stiring times are anticipated in both bodies.

We will endeavor to keep our readers advised of the proceedings.

THE AUTUMN throughout the country has been dry and warm, the like of which can hardly be recollected by the oldest inhabitant. Dry meteorologically, whilst politically a great deluge has swept over the country. Truly both parties have been astonished at the result. The Democrats at the magnitude of their victory, and the Republicans at their unlooked for disand the Republicans at their unlooked for discomfiture. The political revolution is more 10,000 to 12,000 for Governor, with a majority and placing herself in front of it, touched it general and decisive than that of 1840, and the in both branches of the Legislature, and five or results no doubt will tend to harmonize the six Congressmen sections in the bonds of peace.

Grant on the Situation.

It is reported that Gen, Grant argued in a recent Cabinet meeting, that the cause of the votes. It is rumored that the Kellogg party late Waterloo defeat of the Republican party was attributable to the failure of Congress to act on the Louisiana muddle, and the passage of the Civil Rights bill by the Senate, He was firmly convinced that the Civil Rights bill had more to do with the defeat of his party than all other causes combined, and he has expressed himself in such a manner as to leave no hundred votes. It is said he will contest the doubt upon the minds of those with whom he election. had conversed, that if the bill shall be passed at the next session he will interpose his veto.

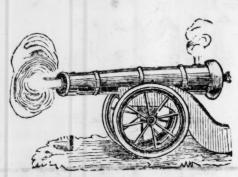

But here comes the "milk in the cocoanut." In looking over the battle-field he was satisfied that "the third-term sensation had nothing to do with the result. The only two strongly pronounced anti-third-termers of the Republican party in New York, Dix for Governor, and Roberts for Congress, were badly beaten. And in South Carolina, where alone the flag of "Third Term was spread to the breeze, and openly supported, there the Administration triumphs. By the same logic, if that flag had been unfurled everywhere, the Republican triumph would have been universal." The President is a good logician! Bah!

THE CONVENTION QUESTION .- This question is again being agitated by the press and influis again being agitated by the press and influential gentlemen of the State. We have expressed ourselves unfavorable to the call of a Convention, at present, and we have not change dependents 22. ed our opinion.

The State Constitution has objectionable features which we would like to see remedied, but we think we had better resort to Legislative enactment as the most popular and economical mode to remedy its defects. Demagogues will misrepresent the Convention question, and as the people have heretofore voted down Convention by some 22,000 votes, we have grave doubts if it would meet with a better fate now. The Conservative Democratic party carried the State last Summer; but, if the Convention question had been agitated, we doubt very much if we could have arrived at anything like the result. Better wait a while longer,

In the great jubilee had by the people of Georgia, at Atlanta, General John B. Gordon the President. For instance, old Cameron, who gave utterance to the following brave, honest words of advice and sentiment. He was then, as almost always, a fit exponent of the thought and sentiment of the representative men of the than he thought; Morton, who sees his Presi-

"One boon I ask in this hour of your deliverance. I ask you to commission me, in your name, to pledge upon the floor of the Senate fidelity to the Union under the Constitution; your acquiescence in laws passed in accordance with the Constitution, good and bad, until lawfully repealed; your support of all rightful authority; your cordial friendship for every man and men of all sections, who will aid in restoring peace to all sections, justice to States, lib-erty to citizens, purity to all departments of the Government and Constitution; to its supremacy over Presidents, Congress, parties and the people. [Loud cheers.] I thank you my countrymen, for that response. You are as temperate in triumph as you were great in adversity. You cherish malice to none, and are hostile only to thieves, usurpers and tyrants." Speaking of this extract, the New York Her-

THE Republican papers seek to comfort each Other with the delnsive opinion that the large Democratic majority in the next House of Representives, to meet in December, 1875, will be of advantage to them in the Presidential campaign of 1876. The New York Herald says:

Comments of the Press.

We might fill our columns with the comments of the Press on the late elections. There seems to be but one opinion, and that is, as the New York Post, (Republican) expresses it:

A MEERSCHAUM MINE.-Mr. Wm. Sprague has discovered in the vicinity of his Shingle factory, on John River, in Caldwell county, a vein of what he believes to be meerschaum. The people around there had been in the habit of using it in the place of chalk for marking purposes. It is quite as white and clear as chalk. Mr. Sprague has a pipe made from this mineral and it has colored beautifully and seems to possess all the qualities of the purest and best meerschanm. THE BORDER FAIR AT DANVILLE, VA., Was a complete success. The exhibition of stock was particularly fine, and the articles in the ladic's department very creditable.

We learn the following premiums were awarded to parties from this section:

W. F. Shultz, Salem, best lot of honey and wheat Jesse Riggs, Salem, best pair of boots. S. T. Mickey, Salem, best lot of wines. Miss Anna Crist, Salem, best mats. Strupe & Son, Clemmonsville, best assortment of leather .-The above is all we know, not having seen the premium list.

The Salem Cornet Band returned home highly delighted with their visit to Danville.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS. John II. Shultz is Agent for Denson's plants, trees and bulbs. See advertisement. R. A. Wommack & Co., enumerate some of their wares in our columns this week. It will pay to examine their goods.

R. Gray. - Sale of valuable property in Salem. N. C. This is a rare chance for manufacturers.

A LARGE OWL was caught in a steel trap on the plantation of Mr. McCuistan, near this place, on Tuesday night of last week, his wings Salem, N. C., Nov. 5, 1874. measuring four feet from tip to tip. His owlship had made night hideous with his hootings for some time past, and finally brought matters to a climax by raiding on the henroost and carrying off a fine guinea fowl. "Roosting high" did no good this time, as on his second raid he lit on the trap secured to a rail, and fared as announced above.

This reminds us of a little fellow near East Bend, who caught six of these nocturnal "prowlers of the air" during one season, winding up his operations with a "screecher," which he called a "young owl."

We regret to learn that Miss Sallie Matthews of Yadkin county, while on a visit to her brother, J. C. Conrad, in Winston, was severely burned on her hand, in endeavoring to extinguish the flames on her dress, which had ignited from the fireplace. The accident might have proved a serious affair, but for the presence of mind exhibited by Miss Matthews .-Great care should be taken by ladies when near an open fireplace.

FAIR .- The Ladies of the Presbyterian Church of Winston will hold a Fair on Tuesday and Wednesday next, the proceeds to be applied towards enclosing the church lot.

FINE Hogs .- We hear of several heavy porkers, ready for slaughter, as soon as the cold weather sets in.

LIVE PARTRIDGES are shipped every few days from this place for New York, and thence to England, for some of the parks of the Noblemen. Our farmers should not allow any "driving and netting" on their plantations. If the nests of these game birds were protected by the farmer, the grasshoppers and other pests would be scarcer.

THE READING CLUB has secured the services of Messrs. Gales and Grissom of Raleigh, Mr. Denson of Pittsboro, and Rev. Mr. Johnson of Lexington, as lecturers for the season. The opening lecture will prohably be delivered in December next, and the others sometime after Christmas. Through the kindness of

THANKSGIVING DAY .- Gov. Brogden has issucd his proclamation, appointing the 26th inst., a day of thanksgiving and prayer. This is the same day the President of the United States has set apart for the same purpose. We have truly much to be thankful for in many points

THE AMERICAN FARMER FOR NOVEMBER is at hand, replete with instructive matter for the farmer, the gardener, the stock raiser and every other ruralist. This is a solid and substantial farm journal, which, while showing the latest advances made in science as applied to agriculture, is at the same time devoted to the practical. A large number of contributors from all sections and in every branch lend their aid in making up a number of great value. The publishers, Sam'l Sands & Son, Baltimore, Md. offer some handsome premiums for clubs for the new volume, and will send the last three numbers of this year free to new subscribers. $1.60 a year, or 5 copies for $5. SUNDAY TRAIN .- We learn that the mail trains now run daily, Sundays included, over the entire length of the North Carolina Rail-

We call attention to the advertisement of the Texas Gift Concert Association of Denison in Flour, another column, which is now fully under way. Tickets are selling rapidly throughout the United States. This Association is endorsed by the leading citizens of Northern Texas, and we recommend all those who desire to invest in an enterprise of this kind to do so at once and secure the $50,000 prize.

MARRIAGE IN A BALLOON. - Cincinnati, October 19.—A very successful balloon ascension was made here this afternoon by Professor Donaldson, who was accompanied by a bridal party of six persons. At the height of about a mile above the city the marriage ceremony was performed. The balloon landed safely about three miles from the place of ascension.

NURSERY AGENCY. Very Choice Trees and Plants.

HAVING TAKEN THE AGENCY FOR Mr. G. Bellis' extensive "Butterwood Nursery." lo ated at Littleton, in this State, I am now prepared o fill orders for TREES and PLANTS of the choicest and most desirable varieties, and on the most satisfactory terms. I would call special attention to the new and very early varieties of PEACHES,—The BEATRICE, LOU-ise and RIVERS, all ripening ahead of Hale; these have now been thoroughly tested in this country, and have obtained the commendation of all who Mr. Bellis commenced packing his Beatrice, last car, (from 5,000 trees) on the 5th of June, shipped them to New York, where they ALL arrived in PRE-FECT ORDER, and sold for $6 to $8 per bushel crate.— Here they will ripen from the 12th to the 20th of June.

Prices of Beatrice, Louise and Rivers 34 per dozand $20 per 100. Other varieties, as per Catalogue.
I would also direct attention to the Newstay Szepting Strawberry of Southern origin, well known and very highly esteemed for a number of years,—but until recently, closely held in private hands.—
This berry is large, of finer flavor than Wikson's and two weeks earlier remaining in hearing for nearly two weeks earlier, remaining in bearing for nearly three months, and is perfectly adapted to our soft and climate. It is a remarkably firm and solid berry. Prices of Plants.—50 cents per doz; $3.50 per 100;

$20 per 1000.

A large stock of Pure Wilson's Albany on hand.

Plants very fine. Send for Catalogue. E. W. LINEBACK.

IF WE WOULD.

If we would but check the speaker When he spoils his neighbor's fame, If we would but help the erring, Ere we utter words of blame;

If we would how many might we Turn from paths of sin and shame?

Ah, the wrongs that might be righted If we would but see the way! Ah, the pains that might be lightened Every hour and every day, If we would but hear the pleadings, Of the hearts that go astray.

Let us step outside the stronghold Of our selfishness and pride, Let us lift our fainting brothers, Let us strengthen ere we chide; Let'us ere we blame the fallen, Hold a light to cheer and guide.

Ah, how blessed-ah, how blessed Earth would be if we'd thus try, Thus to aid and right the weaker, Thus to check each other's sigh, Thus to talk of duty's pathway To our better life on high.

In each life, however lowly.

There are seeds of inghty good;
Still we shrink from sons appealing.
With a timid " if we could;" But a God who judges all things, Knows the truth is, " If we would."

THE UNTERWALD WEDDING.

Maitre Seiler was a well preserved, agile and only at fifty-five did he make the discovery that weighing law and splitting hairs upon the meaning of words and phrases is scarcely all the pleasure to be found in existence.

At fifty-five he awoke to the consciousness that he had wasted life. He was very clever at every point in the common law of Unterwald, but he was not wise enough to know that at that age one can scarcely begin life over

If apart from the law he had ever a passion, it was a quiet, half doubting love of fishing : and, therefore, when he gave up his judgeship, and retired into private life with the respect and even veneration of all who knew him, having angled all his life for clients, and settled the differences of other legal anglers through fish as the one joy of his life.

Indeed, it was this new occupation, amidst prompted Maitre Seiler to the conclusion that he had made a mistake in life when he brought it down from grinding law from New Year's Day to St, Sylvester's, which is the last day in

The old man's heart was desolate. His quiet resigned old housekeeper (a sad spinster who had thrown herself into the pathetic and tears early in life), Maitre Seiler found, now that he saw forest and sky daily, to be quite a wearisome woman; and the consequence was that Maitre Seiler would pack up his fishing wallet with a crust and flask of white wine for his lunch, and go out from six in the morning until

One day, having caught trout until he was tired of hooking them, and the afternoon being close (it was a warm April that year), he fell asleep under a whispering fir tree, and then he slept the sound sleep of innocence for hours.

Then as he awoke, he experienced that wonderful luxury, a gradual regaining of the senses -while a sweet voice was singing in the dis-

When he sat up and rubbed his eyes he found that the sun had set, and that he himself was rather stiffer in the limbs than was exactly comfortable.

The voice came nearer, and through the break in the glade he saw a mountaineer girl spinning as she came slowly forward, followed by two or three browsing goats. The girl was about sixteen; her yellow, light wavy hair fell in two long, red ribbon tied plaits, while the black bodice and poppy-color- tribulation. ed skirt completed a far more charming picture than any the old judge had seen in the court through all his legal years. He sighed lightly. She stopped and looked about; but she show ed no fear.

Dear be alraid," he said gently,

The girl smiled as she saw the pleasant old gentleman and said: "Oh, no; and Bruttlewart and Michlin would butt you if I told them." The goats looked at the stranger in an unde cided way, but apparently resolved to go on munching. And who art thou?"

"I am Lotte."

"And where does Lotte live?" "I am the daughter of the Forester Yeri."

"Ha! ha! art thou the daughter of Forester Yeri? I remind'me I have seen him in my court at sessions and other times. Is his Why, who have we here?" asked the forester, looking out from the head of the stone high.

forest home to the ground. "Food even, Yeri; thy daughter has found me. I am Messire Seiler, late judge of the canton. Hast so soon forgotten me?" "Tis Messire Seiler!" cried the forester, doffing his hat, and hurrying down the steps. "I fell asleep," said the old judge, looking yet upon Lotte; "and though I am still as active as a roe, I did not awake until the sun had gone down. I am a long way from town, my wallet is empty, and so also am I, and, therefore, I am asking thee for some supper,

"With right good will," said the forester, holding out his hand, which the old judge took; for in Switzerland the general equality of riches appears to create an equality of habits; the officer and the private sit down together, and the great man of the district will not find himself ill at ease when he eats his supper with a small farmer, the latter meanwhile, being perfectly hospitable, never servile, and rarely uncomfortable, when face to face with a man of superior social rank.

The good wife, Kristine now coming forth with a welcome, these four people shut out the evening, after entering the forester's preparing supper.

The red check coarse white cloth was soon upon the table, the wooden spoons and platters of wide flowers, was ready for the soup.

Not much of a meal-but plain soup the beef which made it eaten with vinegar and oil, black bread and strong cheese, the whole washed down with some blackish, sour country wine-yet the old judge thought he had rever eaten such a meal.

To tell the truth at once, the old judge was in love with Lotte, though she was only six-teen, and the old gentleman was by that time fifty-eight, if a day.

"I lay me, good judge, you will sleep till late in the morning," said broad-chested Yeri, when they were saying good night. "Oh, no," replied the judge, wishing to cut a good figure before Lotte; "I never was more active than I now am. I shall be up with the lark and out before any of you.' Nevertheless, though they softly called him three times, he never woke, and in fact, did not. present himself until the forester's breakfast had been waiting a whole hour. The forest girl had been out and away for hours, and as he saw her, with the fresh morngentleman of nearly sixty. At twenty he ing color on her face, and holding out to him a thought of nothing but law; at thirty of nothing but pleading; at forty he became a judge; he decided that a pretty girl looked better at

That was the beginning of it.

The prim housekeeper wondered what became of her master, until all capacity for astonishment was gone, while good Yeri and his wife, though they were wonderfully benefitted and honored by the old judge's friendship, were maryellously puzzled to find an answer to the riddle why Maitre Sailer came to their hut four and five times in the week.

One day a barrel of rikvir, a capital wine in these parts, would be sent with Maitre Seiler's compliments, and, within a week, an admirable present of sausage would be received.

The gravest condemnation of the poor old udge, and the best proof of the honesty of the old couple. Yeri and Kristine, were to be found in the fact that these latter never suspected the nearly a score of years, he fell to angling for basis of all these civilities on the part of the smitten old gentleman.

As for trout, the good woman Kristine, was weary of cooking it, so much of that fish did the good old indge bring to the chalet.

He never said much to Lotte, spoke like a father to her, and certainly never enabled the pretty girl to guess what was in his heart. This life went on to the end of June, when

the tall mountain grass was ready for the The old judge, however, had never slept at

But upon that particular night in June, he had made up his mind to speak to Yeri; and then it was he found that judge and orator as he was, he could not plead for himself. the forester. "He does not seem himself."

The time went on, and when at last the judge decided that he would defer it until morning, the forester made the discovery that it was dark, and the moon would not be up for two hours, so the good judge was invited to stop for the night.

He had no idea that his remaining put the primitive family to any inconvenience, no more than at the moment he learned that he took Lotte's room from her.

But, in fact, the young goat-herdess was carried off to her mother's room for the night, while the forester made himself up a bed of furs, &c., on the ground of the living room.

He thought the girl looked pale and anxious but he could not detect that she was in deep

A little while and the forest hut was quite quiet-not a light to be seen. Now they have a habit in parts of Switzer land of cutting the high grass by moonlight, the belief being common that the grass so cut makes better hay than that which falls beneath the scythe in sunlight.

The old judge, unable to sleep, was turning over in his mind what he should say on the following day to the forester, when he heard the tinkle of cow bells, the lumbering of heavy wagons, and the rattle of talking and singing voices, all of which gradually approached.

Not ignorant of the custom of moonlight hay making, the old judge found the rustic sounds rather soothing than not, when he thought he heard a tapping at the window.

He listened and the sound was repeated. He knew that the window was ten or twelve feet from the ground, and that it could only be

The Effects of Imagination-

Imagination is really but a sort of mental aberration, a species of insanity. New facts and experiments are daily adduced in confirmation of this long standing theory. An Italian savant, Signor Volpicelli, has just commu-"What ails the old judge, to-night?" thought | nicated to the French Academy of Sciences, a paper containing a detailed account of certain experiments and curious observations of his. Having met with a number of very nervous persons, who pretended they were very painfully affected by the proximity of a magnet, he determined to satisfy himself whether terrestrial magnetism really produced any effect upon them, or whether the various impressions and sensations they declared they experienced were only due to a disorder of their imagination.

He first submitted them openly to the influence of a powerful magnet. The nervous effects were immediately manifested. The crises continued to take place even when the magnet was stealthily removed, and a common, harmless iron bar was substituted therefor. But when the patients were unconsciously subjectactually failed to experience anything unusual, any peculiar sensation. The magnetic influence and the symptoms arising therefrom were accordingly but the result of fancy.

A distinguished professor who fell into terrible nervous spasms and paroxysms whenever a magnet was placed near him, was surrounded unknown to himself, while delivering one of fracture, and a very bad one at that. had placed magnets in his desk and under it, as well as underneath his chair and all around him. The lecture went on as usual, and was finally brought to a close without any unwonted incident or demonstration. But as the professor was about to take his leave, well pleased with himself and his audience, Volpicelli stopped him, brought him back on the platform. disclosed his little ruse and showed him all the magnets he had been exposed to. The professor was at once seized with a most violent spams, so terribly affected was his imagination at the sight of such a battery.

He called to mind his curious experiments with the divining rod and the exploring pendu-

The divining rod was a forked branch of a nut tree, which the experimenter held in his outstretched hands, and which, as he walked through the fields and meadows, and along the roads in the country, swayed to and fro, and twisted up, and bent into countless shapes or, at least, was supposed to do so whenever it happened to be held over a living spring. subsequently became corrupted into sorcerers -an appellation first bestowed upon those who were supposed to be gifted with the power of wielding the rod in question. Writers of olden times have left us wonderful accounts of the doings and workings of the divining rod; for it seems its use was not always limited to the discovery of springs of water, it also restored lost property, revealed unknown treasure, tracked out fugitives and criminals, and sing-"Messire Seiler, thou art not well," cried the led out the guilty. A Curious Legend.

A new Indian Agency between Grand River and Fort Rice, called Standing Rock, derives its name from a large boulder standing out alone upon the prairie about three miles from the river. There is a strange superstition connected with this rock, and the Sioux City, Iowa, Journal thus tells it:

" Many years ago a powerful band of Indians made that section their stamping ground. The chief of the band deserted his old wife for a young squaw. This so grieved the old Queen that she went back to the river, and sat upon the ground and mourned for several days. Upon the 9th day of her grief she turned into this broken. He soon complained of very sharp large boulder. The Indians at that agency all believe this story to this day, and worship the Horse Tamer and Farrier, boulder as a God. The rock has been decorated with ribbons, pieces of red flannel, and every high-colored piece of cloth they have been able to get hold of since time out of mind. The leader in charge of the party was Elder File, who has been engaged in missionary work for several past in the Highlands and Lowlands of Scotland. The majority of the Saints were from Scotland, although there was a fair number of English and Scandinavians. THE LEGISLATURE.—This body will assemble in Raleigh on Monday, the 16th inst. W hope the business of the General Assembly will be confined to important legislation, discarding the mass of frivolous local matter which generally consumes so much time and lengthens the session, entailing much unnecessary expense upon the State.

Let the session be the shortest on record. The incoming Legislature will have in the House 82 Democrats, 4 Independents and 34 Republicans. The Senate will be composed of 38 Democrats and 12 Republicans.

Congress will convene December 16th; largely Conservative, not a Republican being and as every good citizen takes an interest in the proceedings of Congress and the Legislature, the newspapers will be unusually interesting, as stiring times are anticipated in both bodies.

We will endeavor to keep our readers advised of the proceedings.

THE AUTUMN throughout the country has been dry and warm, the like of which can hardly be recollected by the oldest inhabitant. Dry meteorologically, whilst politically a great deluge has swept over the country. Truly both parties have been astonished at the result. The Democrats at the magnitude of their victory, and the Republicans at their unlooked for discomfiture. The political revolution is more general and decisive than that of 1840, and the results, no doubt, will tend to harmonize the six Congressmen. sections in the bonds of peace.

Grant on the Situation.

It is reported that Gen. Grant argued in a recent Cabinet meeting, that the cause of the late Waterloo defeat of the Republican party was attributable to the failure of Congress to net on the Louisiana muddle, and the passage of the Civil Rights bill by the Senate. He was firmly convinced that the Civil Rights bill had more to do with the defeat of his party than all other causes combined, and he has expressed himself in such a manner as to leave no doubt upon the minds of those with whom he had conversed, that if the bill shall be passed at the next session he will interpose his veto.

But here comes the "milk in the cocoanut." In looking over the battle-field he was satisfied that "the third-term sensation had nothing to do with the result. The only two strongly pronounced anti-third-termers of the Republican party in New York, Dix for Governor, and Roberts for Congress, were badly beaten. And in South Carolina, where alone the flag of "Third Term was spread to the breeze, and openly supported, there the Administration triumphs. By the same logic, if that flag had been unfurled everywhere, the Republican triumph would have been universal." The President is a good logician! Bah!

THE CONVENTION QUESTION.—This question is again being agitated by the press and influential gentlemen of the State. We have expressed ourselves unfavorable to the call of a Convention, at present, and we have not chang- dependents 22.

The State Constitution has objectionable features which we would like to see remedied, but we think we had better resort to Legislative enactment as the most popular and economical mode to remedy its defects. Demagogues will misrepresent the Convention question, and as the people have heretofore voted down Convention by some 22,000 votes, we have grave doubts if it would meet with a better fate now. The Conservative Democratic party carried the State last Summer; but, if the Convention question had been agitated, we doubt very much if we could have arrived at anything like the result. Better wait a while longer.

THE Republican papers seek to comfort each other with the delnsive opinion that the large Democratic majority in the next House of Representives, to meet in December, 1875, will be of advantage to them in the Presidential campaign of 1876. The New York Herald says:

Wednesday's New York Tribune says :- "Th verdict of the country against Grantism is de livered. There were only two great question before the people at this election, One was whether the administration deserves the publ confidence, and the other was whether tt ough to be perpetuated. They have both been and wered in the negative.

Richmond Whig: "We have the Radicals routed and running. But they have lines of entrenchments we cannot carry yet; and in halting in front of them, we may well reflect wheth er it is more probable that we shall finally drive them out or be driven off by them."

The Richmond Dispatch observes that the re- Grand Total 20,000 Gifts, all Cash,.......$2,500,000 volution sweeps on. We add Massachusetts to the number of rescued States. Think of Massachusetts—the last of the States that we hoped for! and of Butler being beaten! Why, this indeed looks like judgment day had come."

Petersburg Index-Appeal: If drunken excess shall mar the first passages of this success; if men, so long deprived of their rights, shall show that they have forgotten how to exercise them—as men long blinded lose the use of their eyes; we shall not long profit by the occasion which Providence has opened so happily before us * * * * Be it known, then, that our plat-form is justice to all; the strict construction of the Constitution; the equal enforcement of the laws: the reformation of the civil service: the retrenchment of public expenses; the appoint-ment of honest and capable men to positions of public honor. Against all these canons, and a hundred others, the Radical party has long and deeply sinned. Returning to power, we must avoid the rocks of abuse and wrong on which their bark dashed itself to pieces. Let us follow sober and dignified counsels. let us lift up the banner of right and justice; and the victory won on the 3d inst., will prove a permanent blessing to posterity, to humanity, and to free institutions throughout all time.

The building is one of the most substantially built houses in the State, and well adapted for manufac-turing purposes, in addition to the milling business, there being ample room for Cotton and Wool Mahinery, it having been originally constructed for that purpose.

The main building is 50 x 75 feet, 31 stories high, with 2 story attachments at either end, 25 x 50 feet, for offices, packing, engine and boiler rooms-all orick and recently recovered with tin. The Mill Machinery consists of 3 setts of Burrs, and all other necessaries complete.
